The Treasury Lords to the verderers of New Forest. We have considered your letter of the 27th Aug. last as to fuel wood claimed by several of the adjacent inhabitants. We think fit that same be allowed according to the directors of the Act of last session [9 Wm. III, c. 33]. The foresters or keepers are therefore to allow same in their respective Walks in such proportions as you think reasonable in respect of such rights. You are to take care that under pretence thereof no waste or spoil (as hath been too much practised) be made of the King's timber but that same be taken by the view or allowance of the respective forester or keeper [out] of the lops of old dead trees or cutting down of stubbs properly so called. They are to certify to you (for transmission to us) the names and abode of the persons to whom they shall make such allowance with the quantity of wood allowed. They are also to take care that no erections made since the 27th Eliz. (which are purprestures in law) take the benefit thereof without some grant or charter especially warranting same. As to the lodges and rails if any further repairs are necessary directions shall be given as usual. On your certifying the names of the regarders who are dead or unqualified to serve care shall be taken for the obtaining a writ to elect the number that is wanting; "but we do not find it practicable, nor is there any form of a writ, to restore those regarders that by the omission you mention are become unqualified by Act of Parliament." Ibid., p. 29.

II, c. 11 which prohibits the importation of any other than Rhenish wines from the Netherlands or Germany: the Customs Commissioners being of opinion that it would be hard to insist on the forfeiture of the ship for so small a quantity; and the judgment having gone by default through inadvertency merely, there being no evidence concerning her at the trial. Out Letters (Customs) XIII, p. 457.

Auditor General of that Colony and being unwilling that the King's service should be neglected or stand still for want of money, did advance money of his own in humble assurance that the debt would be made good to him out of quit rents, whereof he hath now 3,333*l.* 9*s.* 6½*d.* in his hands; but there is an order that it should not be appropriated till there should be orders from the Treasury Lords so doing: therefore prays their orders for transferring [satisfying] said debt out of said quit rents as has been usual in the like cases: "as it has been practised in other extraordinary exigencies of the Government and it was declared by the late King Charles that the quit rents should go towards the support of that Colony as in fact they have done by some means or other ever since, though by the same order 'twas directed that they should not be disposed of till upon certifying how much was in the Treasury [of Virginia] orders should be given for the disposal thereof as matters should require." Out Letters (Plantations Auditor) II, pp. 11–12. Reference Book VII, p. 293.

Same to Mr. Blathwaite. In reply to my Lords' query whether the King would dispense in Mr. Williamson's case with the rule against granting offices for life you reply that the King would not come to any determination thereon without being informed what precedents there have been of late years for dispensing with the said rule. I enclose a list thereof as below which my Lords have received from Mr. Williamson which are more than my Lords thought could have been produced and do believe that some of them might [have] pass[ed] through inadvertency. They are of opinion if any more offices be so granted it would render the said rule wholly ineffectual.

Appending: said list: in each case the docquet being signed at the Treasury.

The Treasury Lords to the Commissioners for the Quarterly Poll for the city of Gloucester. The produce of the Duty will thereby fall considerably short of what might be reasonably expected from your city. We earnestly recommend you to enquire into all matters for or by reason of which any persons are chargeable to the said Act and to set such rates as shall be according to the true intent thereof. The Treasury Lords to Sir Walter Moyle, Knight [one of the Assessment Commissioners] for Co. Cornwall. The assessors in the Middle Division of the Hundred of East for the Quarterly Poll have been guilty of very great neglects particularly in wholly omitting, or taxing at only 4s. gentlemen of very good quality and great estates and rich attorneys in great practice and omitting many good farmers, and single persons however sufficient, and rarely naming wives, children and servants, "not a coach or militia horse taxed, few tradesmen (though there are considerable numbers of such that are rich) are charged" whereby the produce of the tax will fall considerably short. We earnestly recommend you to summon in the assessors and collectors and to enquire into all matters by reason whereof any persons are chargeable and to cause rates to be set on such according to the Act: and to certify us the names of the assessors that have made and of the Commissioners that have allowed such highly prejudicial assessments. Ibid.
